Appreciative Sketch of Hugh Veale, Sr., Formerly of Barre. The Taylor, Texas, Daily Democrat

has the following obituary of Hugh Veale, sr., formerly a resident of Barre: "Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock the funeral of Hugh Veale, sr., who died last Saturday morning at 8 o'clock of a hemorrhage of the lungs induced by tuberculosis, of which he had been a patient, uncomplaining sufferer, for over a year, was held, followed by interment of the remains in the City cemetery. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. E. Carraway, decedent's pastor, of the First Methodist church, and Dr. John A. Held, pastor of the First Baptist church. Rev. Mr. Carraway left his sick bed to pay a tribute to the memory of this good man. Both he and Dr. Held deservedly eulogized the life and works of a noble Christian worker gone to his reward. A large concourse of sorrow-ing friends attended the obsequies, the services at the home and the burial. Eureka camp, No. 80, Woodmen of the World, marched in the procession to the cemetery, and officiated at the burial.

"Hugh Veale, sr., was born in Corn-wall. England, December 11, 1868, and therefore was in the forty-fourth year of his age. The Death Orchid of Venezuela. "The death orchid of the Venezuelan Indians has been proved to be ro mere campfire varn.

There years ago, an orchid-hunter, Grayson, set out to find "El Lugar de los Flores Venenosos," that is, Place of the Poisonous Flowers," which was said to be located in the dense and pathless wilderness occupying the vast stretches between the head-waters of the Orinoco and the Andes. Two weeks passed without any incident out of the ordinary. But one morning there was requested to attend. Per order secre-air. When the orchid hunter and his Indians camped that night, the junglesmells had been entirely lost in the cloying scent. Many of the band refused to go further,
"As Grayson and the others proceeded, the rankly sweet and oppressive odor became stronger, attacking the senses like a narcotic. One after another, the remaining Indians collapsed, till only Grayson and the guide were left, pushing onward. The orchid-hunter felt as if he was being attacked by the insidious power of opium, but retained enough consciousness to become aware, that. gleaming through the trees ahead, he saw flowers of huge size and vivid colors, many-hued clusters of them hanging in trails.

"It was the death orchid. "When he recovered his senses, he found himself being carried back to camp where the rest of his porters had remained. Many of the band were severe ly sick, and many half-witted with the continued effect of the scent."-Suburb an Life Magazine for June.

When a Deacon Broke Loose

By M. QUAD Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

There were only 600 inhabitants in the village of Glendale when the first meeting house, as they still call it in the country, was erected. Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Adventists went in together in the building and used it alternately. As the village grew the different denominations built churches for themselves, and finally ney secretions became unnatural. I have the old church was left to one. As a matter of fact, the old meeting bouse was little better than a barracks. "I reckon any one can praise the Lord from the midst of a brush heap in the woods, but I also reckon that he can do it with a leetle more steam in a comfortable meeting house," said Deacon Pegram.

The dencon was the financial man of the church, but it was years and years before he saw his way clear for the erection of a new edifice. Several for that new meeting house was to be a concrete one. The concrete industry was then in its infancy, but Deacon Pegram had found a man to put the matter through and guarantee a satisfactory job.

Uriah struck town, and things were changed. He knew all about the cement business and was ready to take off his coat and carry the job through if any family would board him gratis Thursday evening, a matinee Friday in return. Deacon Pegram jumped at afternoon, and a final concert Friday the chance. Uriah was told to eat all he if he had dabbled in cement all his life Urlah hustled. He made everybody else hustle. It any one lagged he was right on the spot to say:

"Now, then, don't do no loafing on splendid acoustic properties. Last "Now, then, don't do no loafing on year's soloists expressed themselves as the Lord. This is his job, and he expects things to move lively."

We all know now, though few knew at that time, that there are several grades of cement and that cement workers do not shovel sand and cement together in a haphazard way. There must be due proportions, according to the work to be done. Uriah simply went ahead and shoveled. Providence stood back of him with dry weather until the walls were ready for the roof, and then she got tired of a good thing. There were those who said the blocks were too soft and others who thought they could see bulges in the walls and still others who predicted that two hours' rain would spoil everything, but to all such Deacon Pegram said: "Didn't the floods rage and the lumber come down?"

the nick of time?"

"Yes." "Didn't Brother Higgs see the error dering what we should do for the bricks?"

"He did." "And didn't Providence ordain that those freight cars should be smashed up and the cement scattered over an acre of ground?"

"It looks like it." "And then came Urinh Kingston, At the crossroads he might have turned to the left and gone to Liverpool, but Providence guided him to the right and to us." "But it may rain, and if it does"--"It will not rain for a month to come.

Providence won't permit it to." The deacon talked that way and believed what he talked, and Urlah talked and believed still stronger. And then the rain descended. It set in ut dark one day and came down in a way to soak things. Just at daylight next morning, with the rain still coming down, the two men crept forth to see how it fored with the enterprise. There were no walls left. In place of them was a small lake of mud. Every last block of concrete had melted in the rain. The deacon and Uriah stood and gazed for five long minutes like men stupefied. And then Deacon Pegram broke loose. It was years ago, but they still date things from that day. He whooped. He threw down his hat and jumped on it. He knocked Uriah down and jumped on him. As people came out to see what the trouble was he threw them into the lake of mud and whooped again. He went home and kicked his dog and cuffed his wife's ears, and then be ran amuck through the streets and tore gates off their binges and uprooted sidewalks. Men ran and women dodged, and it took two lightning rod men and a chicken buyer to tle him up. He continued to whoop until his voice gave out, and for three days be was expected to die. These three days allowed Uriah Kingston to get sixty miles away and the take of mnd to crust over. The deacon's pastor called when things had quieted down, and, laying his hand on the patient's bead, he softly said:

"Brother Pegram, I trust you haven't lost your faith in Providence."

"Ob, no," was the reply. "I am sure that Providence has planned for us to use the old meeting house until the roof falls in and then to rent a barn somewhere."

In time the roof did cave in, but no barn was rented. The congregation went over to the Baptists.
